

MORRIS LAING STATEMENT ON COVID-19

The coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic has been challenging for everyone. It has brought about unprecedented changes to our daily lives, and it will undoubtedly continue to do so as the situation rapidly evolves by the day and hour. Our thoughts and prayers are with those who have been directly impacted by the coronavirus.

We are closely following this developing situation and monitoring daily updates and guidance from public health officials, including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Kansas Department of Health and Environment, and local public health agencies.

Our first priority is safeguarding the health and welfare of our employees, clients and the communities we serve. As a result, we have taken the following precautionary steps:

- Morris Laing offices remain open at this time, but we are discouraging in-person meetings and observing social distancing recommendations. Our attorneys can be reached by phone and email. We also have remote videoconferencing, if needed. If an in-person meeting is necessary, we will try to accomplish it in a way that does not compromise health or safety.
- Our attorneys are fully equipped to work remotely and securely from home so that there is no disruption in our ability to provide exceptional service to our clients.
- We are discouraging non-essential travel by our employees. Employees returning from travel will be isolated when warranted.
- We have implemented additional procedures to ensure the proper cleaning, hygiene and safety of our offices.

If you have any questions or concerns arising from the coronavirus situation or any other legal matter, please contact us. We are going to be here for you and we are going to get through these unsettling times together.
